US Share Buyback Announcements

Feb 20, 2026 – Apr 20, 2026

Scope: New authorizations, program increases, and program re-initiations by US-listed companies. Source: Bigdata.com (news, premium news, SEC filings). Hyperlinks in the Company (ticker) — source column link to the underlying document.

Executive summary

Buyback activity over the window was broad-based, spanning mega-cap tech (KLA, Qualcomm, Salesforce), large-cap industrials and financials (M&T Bank, Allegion, Teleflex), and a long tail of small/mid-caps. Total announced new or expanded authorizations captured below sum to roughly $40+ billion — dominated by Salesforce ($25.0B), Qualcomm ($20.0B), KLA ($7.0B), M&T Bank ($5.0B), and Expeditors ($3.0B).

Three themes dominate the "reason given" language:

1. Undervaluation / stock trading below intrinsic value — the most common justification (Slide, Freshworks, SuperX, GameSquare, Forum Markets, InMode).
2. Confidence in long-term strategy / strong balance sheet — near-universal companion language (Braze, Honest Company, LifeStance, Inogen, Nutanix, Hillman, Trex).
3. Return of capital + offset dilution from equity compensation — more common among mature, profitable companies (Corpay, SM Energy, Teleflex, Qualcomm).

Several first-ever programs were announced (Honest Company, Hillman, Lands' End), signaling that newly profitable or recently public issuers are reaching the stage where capital return is viewed as a credible signaling tool.

Patterns worth flagging for a PM audience

What's different this window. Large-cap tech is leading on dollar size (Salesforce $25B, Qualcomm $20B, KLA $7B), but the "undervaluation" framing is concentrated at the mid-and-small-cap end (Freshworks, Slide, GameSquare, Braze, SuperX, Forum Markets).

Mega-caps cite discipline and dividend-plus-buyback parity; smaller issuers cite mispricing directly. This is a reasonable read on where management teams think the market is wrong.

What matters. The most credible signals are programs paired with (a) an ASR (Braze, Teleflex), (b) a specific valuation threshold (OceanPal's 0.8x mNAV), or (c) a disclosed dollar pace tied to FCF (SM Energy 20% of quarterly FCF; Hillman $20–25M/yr). Programs without size or cadence (Forum Markets "re-initiation") are weaker signals.

Watch-fors. Several first-ever programs from recently-public or turnaround names (Honest Company, Hillman, Lands' End) may be more about signaling than capacity — worth tracking actual execution in the next quarterly filings vs the authorized amounts.

Methodology & limitations

- Searches covered news, premium news, and SEC filings in the Bigdata.com corpus between Feb 20, 2026 and Apr 20, 2026.
- "Announcement date" = the publication timestamp of the earliest source captured; for some issuers the board authorization date differs (e.g., Honest Company authorized Feb 20, announced Feb 25).
- A handful of non-US issuers appeared in the search results (BBVA, Tesco, Ericsson, Christian Dior, EVS, SEB, Fortuna Mining, Palace Capital, Curaleaf, Locate Technologies, NAXS, Logitech) and have been excluded from the tables above per the US-only scope. Curaleaf's NCIB runs via TSX despite US operations — excluded.
- "Reason given" quotes are taken directly from company statements or press releases as cited in the underlying documents; where only brief-style coverage was available, the reason column notes that.
- This is an announcement-level report, not an execution-tracker. Actual repurchase activity, shares retired, and average prices are disclosed in subsequent 10-Q / 10-K filings.
- Hyperlinks point to the source document in Bigdata.com or, for SEC filings, directly to SEC EDGAR. Brief-style entries without a direct document link are marked with the publication name only.
